Project Title: “Interior Design: More Than Meets the Eye”

The goal for the Standley Lake project, “Interior Design: More Than Meets the Eye,” was to have a raise awareness for and lack of school funding across the nation and the importance of design elements. FCCLA members connected workplace skills in the role of a designer and used the skills gained through the Family and Consumer Sciences class, Interior Design. Chapter members researched design elements and theory in an effort to bring this information to the community and two local educational institutions, Northridge Elementary School and Warren Technical School. When the members finished constructing finish boards, design boards and scale drawings for the school's areas, they presented their design concepts to the committee. In addition, members educated a small group of administrators and teachers on changes in space planning, lighting, and color that school personnel can implement to increase academic achievement, create a more multi-culturally inviting environment and reduce bullying.
